

FREE DELIVERY

To Be Inaugurated in Bedford June Fifteenth.

POSTMASTER JOHN LUTZ

Explains—Carriers to Be Chosen by Competitive Examination—Blanks at Postoffice.

This office has been notified by the Post Office Department to inaugurate Free Delivery in Bedford on June 15, 1908. The service will begin with three carriers, who will be appointed by the Department after an examination of candidates has been held.

The Civil Service Commission will give a competitive examination to applicants for the position of carriers, notice of which will be given in the town papers. Blank applications or requests for admission to the examination can only be obtained at this office. Notice will be promptly given as soon as the applications are received here, so that all who wish can obtain them in ample time. Notice will also be given of the time and place of holding the examination.

During the intervening time there are some other matters that need attention. Letters cannot be delivered to houses that are not numbered; it therefore behooves those whose houses are not numbered to attend to this matter without further delay. It is also very desirable that persons should provide boxes or drops for the receipt of their mail so that it may be speedily and safely delivered. The boxes or drops should be attached to the outer door, with a slot or opening of sufficient size to admit an official sized envelope or an ordinary newspaper.

A word of caution is needed in regard to boxes. It is not unusual, when it becomes known that Free Delivery is about to be established in a town, to find fraudulent agents putting in an appearance, soliciting orders for boxes and collecting in advance part or all of the price of the boxes and then disappearing. No boxes or drops should be purchased or ordered from any one except such persons as you know to be honest and reliable.

Carriers will not be allowed to deliver mail at side or rear doors, nor to enter of rooms in apartment houses, nor above the second floor of office buildings where there are no elevators.

A few persons have written to the Post Office Department for blank applications and other information in regard to Free Delivery. This is entirely unnecessary and accomplishes nothing. Application blanks will be obtainable at this office in ample time and all proper or necessary information will be given out from this office as promptly as possible after it has been received.

John Lutz, Postmaster.

LIFE IN CAMP

Prisoner Escapes—Fifty Marines Returning to the States.
Camp Columbia, Havana, Cuba,
March 19, 1908.

Editor Gazette:

The Carnival is over and the people have now turned their attention to racing. A stock company has built a race track near the camp and a number of horses were brought over from the Southern States; the races take place every afternoon and large crowds attend. The Cubans are great gamblers and a great deal of money changes hands each day. There is no Sunday in Cuba and that is when the largest crowds gather. An automobile race is scheduled today which will take place on the Malecon in Havana.

The Cavalry and Artillery are practicing their drills at Pinar del Rio and will be away until the end of April. It makes duty pretty hard for those left in camp as those are the two largest branches of the service in this camp. There are about fifty Marines to be sent back to the States on Monday, the 23rd. This list includes all men who have served two years in foreign service. All the rest of us are wishing we were on the list; our two years' foreign service will be up next September and then we hope to get back in "God's Country." We left Philadelphia eighteen months ago today.

A few days ago a sentry had three prisoners out at work and one of them tried to get away. The sentry commanded him to halt but the prisoner kept on running; the sentry then fired two shots at him but missed, and the prisoner reached the tall weeds near the camp and disappeared. The report of the shots brought the guard and searching parties went out in each direction. The sentry turned his other prisoners over to another sentry and started after the fugitive. After about an hour he came back with his man, having captured him in an old brickyard some distance from the camp. Everybody was glad to see him captured again as it saved the sentry from going in the Guard House himself. One prisoner escaped from the Guard House by prying the iron bars apart, and the sentry who was on that post at the time is now in confinement and the Corporal of the Guard under arrest in his quarters, awaiting trial by General Court Martial for neglect of duty. So it doesn't pay to take any chances with the prisoners. The sentries now on post at the Guard House carry loaded guns with orders to "shoot to kill." One has his hands full looking after a hundred prisoners.

The weather is almost perfect here now although a trifle warm and nearly everybody has the "lazy fever." We do lots of "bunk fatigue."

Very truly,
Vance L. Ealy,
Corporal, U. S. M. C.

His wife and nine children survive him, among whom are Mrs. Hannah Fink of Stonerstown and Samuel of New Enterprise, this county.

Easter Cantata

The Easter Cantata, entitled "From Olivet to Calvary," now in preparation by a chorus choir under direction of Prof. S. H. Koontz, will be rendered in the Reformed church during Easter week. As this cantata is a strong musical work, with hearty choruses and pleasing part songs, we have reason to expect a treat in store and should encourage this worthy effort on the part of our Christian workers by giving them a crowded house.

CHEAP NITROGEN

Secured by Inoculating With Bacteria—Important to Farmers.

Schellsburg, Pa., March 24, 1908. In high-grade fertilizers nitrogen costs 15 cents, potash five cents and phosphoric acid 7 1/2 cents per lb.; in lower grades the cost is higher. Fresh stable manure is worth (solid and liquid) $2.55 a ton, and solid only $1.57 a ton; straw mixed in reduces the value, of course. Loss of liquid manure unbalances the fertilizer, depriving it of nitrogen and potash, but the nitrogen can be easily supplied.

The legumes (clovers, alfalfa, peas, beans, vetch, etc.), through a bacteria, draw nitrogen from the air. These bacteria form bulbs on the roots of the plant, ranging from the size of a pea to almost invisible. When the clover is turned under or the roots are plowed the extra nitrogen in these decaying bulbs is used by the succeeding crop. If the roots are "well set" with bacteria the supply of nitrogen left in the ground is far greater than was in the ground when the clover was planted. The added nitrogen depends exactly upon the number of these bulbs formed on the roots. The effect of a "well set" stand of clover, etc., is felt for several years.

Our last year's experiments here with peas set with bacteria, as compared with the same seed unset, showed nearly double crops in favor of those set, and the crop following (celery) showed double weight in favor of the ground where the inoculated peas had been planted, as against the same celery planted in uninoculated ground. These bacteria will not do well in sour soil. If the soil is at all sour, lime at the rate of not over 50 bushels per acre (25 is better) should be used. The rest of the work is simple. A letter, written to Dr. Karl F. Kellerman, Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, will bring a form of application which is easy to fill out. At the proper time the department will send free a small bottle (sealed), a tablet, and instructions. One gallon of water-boiled five minutes to sterilize it, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a gallon crock (cleaned carefully with hot water), and in 24 hours you will have enough stuff to moisten two bushels of clover seed. The seed must be dried in a dark place and can then be planted at any time within ten days. The yield of clover will be largely increased and enough nitrogen added to the ground to take the place of many dollars' worth of high-grade fertilizer. Moreover, that field is fixed for the next crop of clover, as soil (100 pounds per acre) from that field will prepare another field for clover if drilled in with the fertilizer.

Of course, the nitrogen does not take the place of potash and phosphoric acid—these must be supplied for whatever crop is grown—but nitrogen is high priced as compared with other elements for fertilizing, and inoculation is a particular economy because the crop of clover need not be turned under. The hay can be cut and still nitrogen in large quantities will have been added to the ground, and the crop of hay will more than pay for the necessary potash and phosphoric acid.

G. A. R. ENTERTAINMENT

Maj. R. H. Hendershot Pleased Bedford Audience.

The entertainment given in Assembly Hall Friday evening of last week, under the auspices of Maj. William Watson Post, G. A. R., by the "Drummer Boy of the Rappahannock," Maj. R. H. Hendershot, and son, assisted by the Bedford Orchestra, the Local Temperance Legion, students of the High School and Katie and John Davis, was a signal success and netted the Post a neat sum.

The house was crowded and the several numbers were genuinely appreciated. Major Hendershot and son measured up to expectations. Their part of the entertainment was unique in several particulars. The orchestra, of which Bedford is justly proud, maintained its high standard. The Salute and State Song by the Local Temperance Legion certainly gave the people of the town an idea of the noble work that is being done in the organization by Miss Shuck and Miss Schell. The work of the students of the High School was a credit to the participants and their instructors.

Part one of the program was concluded with "The Song that the Soldiers Sang" by Katie and John Davis, colored, children of De Charnes Davis. They appeared attired in the Stars and Stripes and delighted the audience with their singing.

Such entertainments are a benefit to any community, and especially to a community in which there is so little to break the monotony. Let us have more of them.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

The Bohemian For April

The April Bohemian with its nine short stories and its splendid illustrations, its special articles and the rarely good selection of its humorous material, is one of the best issues yet of this entertaining monthly.

Two of the short stories are bound to stand out as two of the cleverest productions of fiction in the magazines. One, entitled "The Only Girl and the Other Fellow," by Edwin L. Sabin, is a classic of pure sentiment. Another, entitled "The Coming of the Silence," is a distinct achievement by its author, James Francis Dwyer, who proves here that he is a master of curious psychology and weirdness.

Other stories are: "The Young Person," by Fannie Heaslip Lea, thoroughly clever; "The Service of the Temple," by Eleanor M. Ingram, an Easter-time love story as delicate as frost work; "A Domestic Waterloo," a serio-comedy of married life, by F. Irving Fletcher; "A Bill of Exchange," by R. Leonard Nicholson, an ingenious burglar story.

Miss Mabel Tallaferrro writes of "My Yesterdays," "New York Without the Wherewithal," is a statement based upon fact of the predicament a well-born Englishman found himself in New York when overtaken by the recent panic. An account of "The Princeton Tiger," with many illustrations, by its editor, is the sixth in the series of Humorous College Journalism.

SENSIBLE HOBBY

Well-Known People Devote Spare Time to Uplifting Health.

There is no excuse today for any person, unless afflicted with an incurable disease, to remain sickly with the great advance in medical discoveries.

Stomach troubles are scarcely known to those who have physical culture as their hobby.

To those suffering with indigestion and stomach troubles, the discovery of Mi-o-na stomach tablets is a blessing. This treatment strengthens the muscles of the stomach and bowels and cures the worst cases of indigestion and stomach weakness.

F. W. Jordan shows his faith in the curative powers of Mi-o-na by giving a guarantee with every 50-cent box to refund the money unless the remedy does all that is claimed for it. He takes the whole risk and Mi-o-na will not cost you a penny unless it cures. March 27-28.

Fashion's Dictates

"Since semi-precious stones have become so extremely fashionable," writes Grace Margaret Gould, the fashion editor, in the April Woman's Home Companion, "women depend a great deal on jewelry as the finishing touch to their costume. Of course, we all know that an abundance of cheap jewelry is in the worst possible taste, and no woman of refinement would so bedeck herself. But to wear a necklace of a fine gold or platinum chain, artistic and unusual, finished with a flower-shaped pendant made of baroque pearls and white or green metal, set with tiny diamonds, is in perfect taste if it is in harmony with the type of gown with which it is worn."

"Banglelets can also give a very artistic finishing touch to a costume. Old-fashioned designs for banglelets are much sought, and a new cameo mounted on a gold band is one of the favored new ideas. An exquisite design for a banglelet shows a large pink-and-white cameo having the effect of being held in place by bunches of pearl grapes."

"Flower pins studded with colored stones are much used at present, for this spring the artificial flower is worn with street costumes, and the pin to hold it has become quite a necessity."

This is what Hon. Jake Moore, State Warden of Georgia, says of Kodol For Dyspepsia: "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Dear Sirs—I have suffered more than twenty years from indigestion. About eighteen months ago I had grown so much worse that I could not digest a crust of corn bread and could not retain anything on my stomach. I lost 25 lbs., in fact I made up my mind that I could not live but a short time, when a friend of mine recommended Kodol. I consented to try it to please him and I was better in one day. I now weigh more than I ever did in my life and am in better health than for many years. Kodol did it. I keep a bottle constantly, and write this hoping that humanity will be benefited. Yours very truly, Jake C. Moore, Atlanta, Aug. 10, 1904." Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Miscellaneous Fashions

The cheek is larger than the pin cheeks of other years, on the new silks, and it is mostly in two tones of the same color.

Stripes are rather wide and they will, it is said, be made up so as to wind diagonally around the figure.

A pretty stripe is in light blue, Nile green and pearl, the latter stripe being the widest.

Even in daytime gray hair can be beautified by adornment with lovely silver gauze or a snood of silver ribbon.

Many pretty tailored gowns are made of soft cotton velvet that is called "frantet."

Negligee sacques of knitted shotland wool are almost unsurpassed for novelty as well as for their delightful warmth.

A LIFE AT STAKE

CHAPTER FIVE

"Ach, himmel!" exclaimed Frau Yorvan, and "Ach, himmel!" she exclaimed again, her voice rising to a wail, with a frantic uplifting of the hands.

The grand duchess grew pale, for the apple cheeked lady suddenly exhibited these alarming signs of emotion while passing a window of the private dining room. Evidently some scene of horror was being enacted outside, and Virginia and Miss Portman had been away for many hours.

It was the time for tea in England, for coffee in Rhaetia. Frau Yorvan had just brought in coffee for one, with heart shaped sugared cakes which would have appealed more poignantly to the grand duchess' appetite if the absent ones had been with her to share them. Naturally at the good woman's outburst her imagination instantly pictured disaster to the one she loved.

"What, oh, what is it you see?" she implored, her heart leaping, then falling. But for once the courtesy due to an honored guest was forgotten, and the distracted Frau Yorvan fled from the room without giving an answer.

Half paralyzed with dread of what she might have to see, the grand duchess tottered to the window. Was there, yes, there was a procession coming down the hilly street that led to town from the mountain. Oh, horror upon horror! They were perhaps bringing Virginia down, injured or dead, her beautiful face crushed out of recognition! Yet, no; there was Virginia herself, the central figure in the procession. Thank heaven! It could be nothing worse than an accident to poor, dear Miss Portman. But there was Miss Portman, too, and a very tall, bronzed peasant man, loaded with cloaks and rucksacks, headed the band, while the girl and her ex-governess followed after.

Unspeakingly relieved, yet still puzzled and vaguely alarmed, the grand duchess threw up the window overlooking the little village square. But as she strove to attract the truants' attention by waving her hand and crying out a welcome or a question, whichever should come first, the words were arrested on her lips. What could be the matter with Frau Yorvan?

The stout old landlady popped out through the door like a Jack out of his box on a very stiff spring, flew to the overloaded peasant and, almost rudely elbowing Miss Portman aside, began distractedly bobbing up and down, tearing at the bundle of rucksacks and cloaks. Her inarticulate cries ascended like incense to the grand duchess at the open window, adding much to the lady's intense bewilderment.

"What has that man been doing?" demanded the grand duchess in a loud, firm voice, but nobody answered, for the very good reason that nobody heard. The attention of all those below was entirely taken up with their own concerns.

"Pray, mein frau, let him carry our things indoors," Virginia was insisting, while the tall man stood among the three women, motionless, but apparently a prey to conflicting emotions. If the grand duchess had not been obsessed with a certain idea which was growing in her mind she must have seen that his dark face betrayed a mingling of amusement, impatience, annoyance and boyish mischief. He looked like a man who had somehow stumbled into a false position from which it would be difficult to escape with dignity, yet which he half enjoyed. Torn between a desire to laugh and fly into a rage with the officious landlady, he frowned warningly at Frau Yorvan, smiled at the princess and divided his energies between quick, secret gestures intended for the eyes of the Rhaetian woman and endeavors to unburden himself in his own time and way of the load he carried.

With each instant the perturbation of the grand duchess grew. Why did the man not speak out what he had to say? Why did the landlady first strive to seize the things from his back, then suddenly shrink as if in fear, leaving the tall fellow to his own devices? Ah, but that was a terrible load he gave her at last—the poor, good woman! Perhaps he was a brigand! And the grand duchess remembered tales she had read—tales of fearful deeds, even in these modern days, done in wild mountain fastnesses and remote villages such as Alleheiligen—not in Rhaetia perhaps, but then there was no reason why they should not happen in Rhaetia at a place like this. And if there were not something evil, something to be dreaded, about this big, dark browed fellow, why had Frau Yorvan uttered that exclamation of frantic dismay at sight of him and rushed like a mad woman out of the house?

It occurred to the grand duchess that the man must be some notorious desperado of the mountains who had obtained her daughter's confidence or got her and Miss Portman into his power. But, she remembered, fortunately some or all of the mysterious gentlemen stopping at the inn had returned and were at this moment assembled in the room adjoining hers. The grand duchess resolved that at the first sign of insolent behavior or threatening on the part of the luggage carrier these noblemen should be promptly summoned by her to the rescue of her daughter.

Her anxiety was even slightly allayed at this point in her reflections by the thought (for she had not quite outgrown an innate love of romance) that the emperor himself might go to Virginia's assistance. His friends were in the next room, having come down from the mountain about noon, and there seemed little doubt that he was among them. If he had not already looked out of his window, drawn by the landlady's excited voice, the grand duchess resolved that in the circumstances it was her part as a mother to make him look out. She had promised to help Virginia, and she would help her by promoting a romantic first encounter.

In a penetrating voice which could not fail to reach the ears of the men next door, or the actors in the scene below she adjured her daughter in English.

This language was the safest to employ, she decided hastily, because the brigand with the rucksacks would not understand, while the flower of Rhaetian chivalry in the adjoining room were doubtless acquainted with all modern languages.

"Helen!" she screamed, loyally remembering in her excitement the part she was playing. "Helen, where did you come across that ferocious looking ruffian? Can't you see he intends to steal your rucksacks or—or blackmail you or something? Is there no manservant about the place whom the landlady can call to help her?"

All four of the actors on the little stage glanced up, aware for the first time of an audience, and had the grand duchess' eyes been younger she might have been still further puzzled by the varying and vivid expressions of their faces. But she saw only that the dark browed peasant man who had glared so haughtily at poor Frau Yorvan was throwing off his burden with haste and roughness.

"I do hope he hasn't already stolen anything of value," cried the grand duchess. "Better not let him go until you've looked into your rucksacks. Remember that silver drinking cup you would take with you!"

She paused, not so much in deference to Virginia's quick reply as in amazement at Frau Yorvan's renewed gesticulations. Was it possible that the woman understood more English than her guests supposed and feared lest the brigand, perhaps equally well instructed, might seek immediate revenge? His bare knees alone were evidence against his character in the eyes of the grand duchess. They gave him a brazen, abandoned air, and a young man who cultivated so long a space between stockings and trousers might be capable of any crime.

"Oh, mother, you're very much mistaken," Virginia was protesting. "This man is a great friend of mine and has saved my life. You must thank him. If it were not for him I might never have come back to you."

At last the meaning of her words penetrated to the intelligence of the grand duchess through an armor of misapprehension.

"He saved your life?" she echoed. "Oh, then you have been in danger! Heaven be thanked for your safety, and also that the man's not likely to know English or I should never forgive myself for what I've said. Here is my purse, dearest. Catch it as it throw and give it to him just as it is. There is at least £20 in it, and I only wish I could afford more. But what is the matter, my child? You look ready to faint."

As she began to speak she snatched from a desk at which she had been writing a netted silver purse. But while she paused, waiting for Virginia to hold out her hands, the girl forbade the contemplated act of generosity with an imploring gesture.

"He will accept no reward for what he has done except our thanks, and those I give him once again," the girl answered. She then turned to the chamois hunter and made him a present of her hand, over which he bowed with the air of a courtier rather than the rough manner of a peasant. And the grand duchess still hoped that the emperor might be at the window, as really it was a pretty picture and, it seemed to her, presented a pleasing phase of Virginia's character.

She eagerly awaited her daughter's coming, and, having lingered at the window to watch with impatience the rather ceremonious leave taking, she hastened to the door of the improvised sitting room to welcome the mountaineers as they returned to tell their adventures.

"My darling, who do you think was listening and looking from the window next ours?" she breathlessly inquired when she had embraced her newly restored treasure, for the secret of the adjoining room was too good to keep until questions had been put. "Can't you guess? I'm surprised at that since you were so sure last night of a certain person's presence not far away. Why, who but your emperor himself?"

The princess laughed happily and kissed her mother's pink cheek. "Then he must have an astral body," said she, "since one or the other has been with me all day, and it was to him—or his doppelgänger—that you offered your purse to make up for accusing him of stealing."

The grand duchess sat down, not so much because she wished to assume a sitting position as because she experienced a sudden uncontrollable weakness of the knees. For a moment she was unable to speak or even to speculate, but one vague thought did trail dimly across her brain: "Heavens, what have I done to him? And maybe some day he will be my son-in-law."

Meanwhile Frau Yorvan—a strangely subdued Frau Yorvan—had drooping followed the chamois hunter into the inn.

"My dear old friend, you must learn not to lose that well meaning head of yours," said he in the hall.

"Oh, but, your majesty!"

"Now, now, must I remind you again that his majesty is at Kronburg or Petersbruck or some other of his residences when I am at Alleheiligen? This time I believe he's at the baths of Melina. If you can't remember these things I fear I shall be driven away from here to look for chamois elsewhere than on the Schneehorn."

"Indeed, I will not be so stupid again, your—I mean I will do my very best not to forget. But never before have I been so tried, to see your high-born, imperial shoulders loaded down as if—as if you had been a common gepackträger for tourists instead of—"

"A chamois hunter. Don't distress yourself, good friend. I've had a day of excellent sport."

"For that I am thankful. But to see you—to see you coming back in such an unsuitable way has given me a weakness of the heart. How can I order myself civilly to those ladies who have—"

"Who have given peasant Leopold some hours of amusement. Be more civil than ever for my sake. And, by the way, can you tell me the names of the ladies? That one of them—a companion, I judge—is a Miss Manchester. I have heard in conversation, but the others—"

"They are mother and daughter, sir. The elder, who in her ignorance cried out such treasonable abominations from the window, as I could tell even with the little English I have picked up, is Lady Mowbray. I have seen the name written down, and I know how to speak it because I have heard it pronounced by the companion, the Mees Manchester. The younger, the beautiful one, is also a mees, and the mother calls her Helene. They talk together in English, also in French, and, though I have so few words of either language, I could tell that London was mentioned between them more than once while I waited on the table. Besides, it is painted in black letters on their traveling boxes."

"You did not expect their arrival?"

"Oh, no, sir! Had they written beforehand at this season, when I generally expect to be honored by your presence, I should have answered that the house was full or closed or any excuse which occurred to me to keep strangers away. But none have ever before arrived so late in the year, and I was taken all unawares when my son, Alois, drove them up last night. He did not know you had arrived, as the papers spoke so positively of your visit to the baths, and I could not send travelers away. You have bidden me not to do so once they are in the house. But these ladies are here but for a day or two more on their way to Kronburg for a visit, and I thought—"

"You did quite right, Frau Yorvan. Has my messenger come up with letters?"

"Yes, your—yes, sir. Just now also a telegram was brought by another messenger, who came and left in a great hurry."

The chamois hunter shrugged his shoulders and sighed an impatient sigh. "It's too much to expect that I should be left in peace for a single day, even here," he muttered as he went toward the stairs.

To reach Frau Yorvan's best sitting room (selfishly occupied, according to one opinion, by four men absent all day on a mountain) he was obliged to pass by a door through which issued unusual sounds. So unusual were they that the emperor paused.

Some one was striking the preliminary chords of a folksied in his favorite instrument, a Rhaetian variation of the zither. As he lingered, listening, a voice began to sing. Ah, what a voice!

Softly seductive it was as the cooling of a dove in the spring to its mate, pure as the purring of a brook among meadow flowers, rich as the deep notes of a nightingale in his passion for the moon. And, for the song, it was the heartbreaking cry of a young Rhaetian peasant who, lying near death in a strange land, longs for one ray of sunrise light on the bare mountain tops of the homeland more earnestly than for his first sight of an unknown heaven.

The man outside the door did not move until the voice was still. He knew well, though he could not see, who the singer had been. It was impossible for the plump lady at the window or the thin lady with the glasses to own a voice like that. It was the girl's. She only of the trio could so exhale her soul in the very perfume of sound, for to his fancy it was like hearing the fragrance of a rose breathed aloud. "I have heard an angel," he said to himself, but in reality he had heard Princess Virginia of Baunenburg-Drippe showing off her very prettiest accomplishment in the childish hope that the man she loved might hear.

Leopold of Rhaetia had heard many golden voices—golden in more senses of the word than one—but never before, it seemed to him, a voice which so stirred his spirit with pain that was bittersweet, pleasure as blinding as pain and a vague yearning for something beautiful which he had never known.

If he had been asked what that something was he could not, if he would, have told, for a man cannot explain that part of himself which he has never even tried to understand. Before he had moved many paces from the door the lovely voice, no longer plaintive, but swelling to brilliant triumph, broke into the national anthem of Rhaetia—warlike, inspiring as the "Marseillaise," but wider, calling her sons to face death singing in the defense.

"She's an English girl, yet she sings our Rhaetian music as no Rhaetian woman I have ever heard can sing it," he told himself, slowly passing on to his own door. "She is a new type to me. I don't think there can be many like her. A pity that she is not a princess or else—that Leopold, the emperor, and Leo, the chamois hunter, are not two men. Still, the chamois hunter of Rhaetia would be no match for Miss Mowbray of London, so the weights would balance in the scales as unevenly as now."

He gave a sigh and a smile that lifted his eyebrows. Then he opened the door of his sitting room to forget among certain documents which urged the importance of an immediate return to duty the difference between Leopold and Leo, the difference between women and a woman.

"Goodby to our mountains tomorrow morning," he said to his three chosen companions. "Hey for work and Kronburg!"

She was going to Kronburg in a few days, according to Frau Yorvan. But Kronburg was not Alleheiligen, and Leopold, the emperor, was not at his palace in the way of meeting tourists or even "explorers."

"She'll never know to whom she gave her ring," he thought, with the dense innocence of a man who has studied all books save women's looks.

"And I'll never know who gives her a plain gold one for the finger on which she once wore this."

But in the next room, divided from him by a single wall sat Princess Virginia of Baunenburg-Drippe.

"When I meet again at Kronburg, he mustn't dream that I knew all the time," she was saying to herself. "That would spoil everything—just at first. Yet, oh, some day how I should love to confess all—! Only I couldn't possibly confess except to a man who would excuse or perhaps even approve because he had learned to love me well. And what shall I do, how shall I bear my life now I've seen him, if that day should never come?"

IS MIXED OFTEN

Druggists Hear Much Praise for This Mixture

IS SPLENDID RECIPE

Lots of Men and Women Here Had the Simple Home-Made Mixture Prepared, Says Druggist.

Some remarkable stories are being told about town and among the country people coming in of this simple home-made mixture curing Rheumatism and Kidney trouble. Here is the recipe and directions for taking: Mix by shaking well in a bottle one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Take as a dose one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

No change need be made in your usual diet, but drink plenty of good water. This mixture, which one authority in a leading Philadelphia newspaper, has a peculiar tonic effect upon the kidneys; cleansing the clogged pores of the eliminative tissues, forcing the kidneys to sift and strain from the blood the uric acid and other poisonous waste matter, overcoming Rheumatism, Bladder and Urinary troubles in a short while.

A New York druggist who has had hundreds of calls for these ingredients since the first announcement in the newspapers last October stated that the people who once try it swear by it, especially those who have Urinary and Kidney trouble and suffer with Rheumatism.

The druggists in this neighborhood say they can supply the ingredients, which are easily mixed at home. There is said to be no better blood-cleansing agent or system tonic known, and certainly none more harmless or simple to use.

For Fever Patients

It is not so much the custom as formerly to give medicines for the reduction of fevers. Before the coal-tar products, phenacetin, antipyrin and a number of such drugs had been discovered, now some twenty-five years ago, quinine was greatly depended upon to bring down the temperature. Sponging with moderately cold water, now used very commonly in the hospitals, is comforting and will bring down the temperature considerably. This can be done under the bed-clothes, and is not so much a shock as the cold baths which some physicians recommend. The cold baths should be ordered by physicians, and superintended by one sufficiently skilled to judge of the state of the patient. Sponging the palms of the hands with a cloth wrung out of water and alcohol, half of each, will cool the hands and be very grateful to the patient. At the same time apply to the head cold cloths. Place a block of ice in a basin by the bedside, upon which put the pieces of cloth of a size to fit the forehead when folded two or three times, and replace the cooled ones every few minutes. These applications are grateful to the patient and will prevent the fever from affecting the brain and assist in lowering the temperature. —Health and Sanitation, in The Ladies' World for April.

SIMPLE WASH CURES ECZEMA

Itching, Burning Skin Disease Routed Without Use of Injurious Drugs.

Great inventors often have been praised for surrendering the secrets of their discoveries. Practically the same thing happened in the medical world in the case of Dr. Decatur D. Dennis, the eminent skin specialist of Chicago.

Dr. Dennis, in his own office practice, discovered that pure vegetable oil of wintergreen, properly mixed with other simple remedies was practically a sure specific for Eczema, psoriasis, barber's itch, salt rheum, and other itching skin diseases. But the oil of wintergreen alone was found to be ineffective. It required other mild ingredients such as glycerine and thymol compounded with the wintergreen to produce the real eczema cure.

This compounded D. D. D. Prescription positively takes away the itch at once—the instant it is applied to the skin. This vegetable liquid does away with the deleterious drugs so long used in an attempt to doctor the blood, whereas modern science has determined that eczema is first and all the time a skin disease.

If you want to know more about the merits of D. D. D. Prescription, call at our store. We vouch for this remedy. F. W. Jordan, Bedford, Pa.

Change in Our Flag

Because of a general misapprehension on the subject of the change in the national flag, necessitated by the admission of Oklahoma to the Union, the War Department has found it necessary to issue circular letters to correspondents suggesting designs for the flag, that a design has been already adopted to go into effect on the 4th of July next.

In the approved design the field or union of the flag consists of forty-six stars arranged in six rows, the first, third, fourth and sixth rows having eight stars and the second and fifth rows having seven stars each.

THE NEW POSTAL ORDER

The order of the U. S. Postoffice Department which forbids publishers of weekly papers to use the mails for sending papers to subscribers more than one year in arrears goes into effect April 1.

This order, though rather severe on papers that have long been accustomed to extend credit for a longer time to many subscribers, will, in the end, benefit both publisher and subscriber. It will tend to put the newspaper business on a cash basis, which will be most desirable, for the publisher will not be in danger of losing large accounts and it will be much easier for subscribers to settle their accounts if paid yearly.

NOT OF THE "COMMON HERD"

The announcement last week of John M. Reynolds for Congress, in the editorial columns of the two county papers which he controls, called forth from true Republicans many expressions that were far from complimentary to the man whose supreme selfishness and egotism are again made apparent. The men who followed him into the Republican fold with those who always were Republicans are herded together out in the cold, while the one whom they have made leader of the local annex of the Penrose machine is comfortably domiciled in the political parlor. Such is the Reynolds of today, and such has been his disposition throughout his political career; he is for Reynolds. Of course, when he can further his own interests he condescends to associate with the rank and file of the party, but by this latest snub he gives notice that he doesn't want to run any risks of contamination by having his name appear in print alongside "common" candidates.

LICENSE COURT

Associate Judges Brice and Diehl held a session of court last Saturday to decide whether or not a re-hearing would be granted to Andrew Weimer of Hopewell, who was refused license at the regular session of License Court.

Judge Brice stated that he had gone to Lewistown to consult Judge Woods who said that he would have nothing more to do with the matter. He announced, further, that the re-hearing was refused. Judge Long-enacker then took the floor and stated that he had applied for a re-hearing at the suggestion of both the judges on the bench, who said they desired a re-hearing, to which both nodded assent. He stated further that it was clear where both the judges on the bench stood and have stood from the beginning.

This matter is still a deep mystery as to how it has been from the time Mr. Weimer's license was first refused. At that time he had no warning and there was no remonstrance against him. He was not granted a hearing until this year. The hearing was most favorable to the applicant but it availed nothing. Why? We confess we do not know, but we do know one thing and that is that there were mysterious movements about the town on the day of the license court and especially between the time of the hearing and the refusal of the license.

On that day and during the fatal hour a man who had been wanted a license was seen to emerge from an alley leading out of the block in which the court house stands, into the street that leads to the old foot bridge. He went down that street and crossed the old bridge to the railroad, an hour before train time, and remained along the tracks for a time before going to the station. A man has a right, of course, to walk through any of the streets, lanes, or alleys of the town, but it casts a shadow of suspicion when one who ordinarily would return to the hotel at which he puts up and ride to his train in a bus, chooses to take a circuitous route on foot, through alleys and over practically abandoned foot bridges.

But this is but one of a series of circumstances which are known, none of which reflect credit. It is averred that one member of the present court did make a demand, which, however, was not granted, when a license in this town was to be transferred, and further, it is a matter of record that a license was granted a couple years ago by the Associates, which license had been refused by the whole court at the regular session, for reasons better known to a part of the Court than to the general public.

There is and has been much wrong with the whole matter and it ought to be cleared up. If there is one branch of our government more than another that ought to be above reproach it is the Judiciary.

The Court, it is true, is not required to give reasons for its action but the circumstances surrounding this case are so unusual that it certainly would not be beneath the dignity of the Honorable Court to file reasons.

As stated before we are not advocating the granting of liquor licenses, but as long as they are granted we believe in justice being done and integrity maintained. The sober, honest and industrious landlord—against whom no charges were ever preferred for violations of the law—who is refused license without any visible reason, is an infinitely better type of manhood than the Judge who would stoop to demand money for securing him permission to sell rum or who could be induced in any way to place a monopoly of the business in other hands.

Will Judge Woods declare his position? Will Judge Brice? Will Judge Diehl? The columns of The Gazette are open. The present stigma should be removed from our Court.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Observations on Existing Conditions Under the Dingley Tariff.

Wolfsburg, Pa., March 26, 1908.

Editor Gazette: The Associated Press dispatches on Tuesday announced that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company had discharged 3,140 men in the Altoona shops and nearly 200 men at the Harrisburg shops. I am not finding fault with the railroad company for cutting down expenses. If they did not do this, they would very soon go in the hands of receivers, or bankruptcy, and all on account of the damnable laws enacted by the last Legislature at Harrisburg and by the present administration at Washington.

Never in the history of this country have there been so many "empty dinner pails"—aye, and stomachs too—as in this day and hour. Never has the "bread line" been so long as at present. Never was there more or thinner soup ladled out to the half-starved in the cities than is being done today.

And all this is happening under your sweet and wholesome DINGLEY TARIFF. This is what Republican campaign orators call protecting the laboring man—yes, it protects them about like the wolves in the mountains of Wyoming the other night protected the Italians in their auto car.

Dear Bro. "T": In answer to your article of last week, signed "T." ## Nursing baby?

It's a heavy strain on mother.

Her system is called upon to supply nourishment for two.

Some form of nourishment that will be easily taken up by mother's system is needed.

Scott's Emulsion contains the greatest possible amount of nourishment in easily digested form.

Mother and baby are wonderfully helped by its use.

A PORTO RICAN CUSTOM.

Prayers For the Dying Recited in the Public Streets.

"A few evenings ago while we were at dinner in our hotel," writes an American author visiting in Porto Rico, "we heard the tinkling of a small bell just outside the hotel doors. Instantly Salvador, the waiter, stopped in the little bustling run with which he waits on the guests, hurriedly procured a candle, lighted it and carried it out on the balcony. Almost as soon as that candle was on the balcony railing we three Americans were beside it, questioning Salvador, for we were sure something unusual was going on.

"We saw a procession of many people, led by two priests, coming down the street, each person bearing in his hand a lighted candle. They stopped in front of a house facing the hotel, and Salvador told us that somebody was dying there and they were praying for his soul. Up and down the street as far as we could see on every balcony railing was burning either a candle or a kerosene lamp.

"From the absorbed interest of the people gathered in front of open doors and windows of the afflicted house the sufferer was apparently trying to die in full view of the spectators.

"Presently the bell began to ring again, the procession formed once more, and they all moved up the street, Salvador telling us in explanation that there was a second person dying and they were now going to pray for him."

Pepper Cures Nervous Headache

One teaspoonful cayenne pepper, one teaspoonful flour; mix with sufficient water to make a stiff plaster. Spread on cheesecloth; have plaster about the size of a silver dollar. Apply at back of neck, tying in place with a handkerchief. You can keep it on for hours as it does not blister like mustard, but brings the blood from the head. It is especially good for nervous headache.

47 Merchants In Bedford County

whose names are given below, have recently put in a new supply of the famous U. S. Stock Food, U. S. Poultry Food, U. S. Louse Killer, and U. S. Animal Regulator, a worm powder. You may already be using these goods. More than 20,000 farmers and stockmen in Pennsylvania have found them so valuable for stock that they are using them right along.

If your horses are not thriving, if you wish your cows to give more and richer milk, if you desire to fatten your cattle, sheep and hogs more rapidly and keep them healthy, call on any of the merchants whose names are given below and they will supply you with the

which is guaranteed to give such results. It will cause you to make more money out of your stock, whether it be horses, cows, steers, sheep, or pigs, than is possible for you to make without its use. HOW IT DOES IT: It strengthens digestion and causes the largest possible amount of the feed to be assimilated; hence, instead of a large per cent. of the nutriment being passed off in the manure and wasted, it is taken up into the system, thus causing the same amount of feed to produce more fat, more milk, and a stronger and healthier animal.

U. S. POULTRY FOOD

is guaranteed to increase the egg production. It prevents disease, cures cholera, roup, etc., and causes young chicks to grow more rapidly. U. S. LOUSE KILLER, kills lice on stock and poultry, ticks on sheep, fleas on dogs, worms on cabbage, bugs on cucumber, squash and melon vines, slugs on rose bushes, etc. U. S. ANIMAL REGULATOR is a thoroughly reliable worm powder for all live stock.

If you are not a resident of Bedford County drop us a card and we will give you the name of the merchant nearest to you handling the U. S. Goods, which no doubt will be in your home town.

Color of Eggs an Asset

One of the most potent factors, perhaps, that should be considered when selecting a breed for producing eggs for market, is the demand of the market at which the eggs are to be disposed of. Some markets, notably New York City and cities immediately adjacent, prefer white-shelled eggs, and the best trade in these markets will accept none other. Boston prefers brown eggs, and pays a substantial premium for them; and taking the country over, the preference is for brown eggs by a large majority. However, in many markets no preference at all is expressed; in fact, those just mentioned are practically the only markets in which the color of the egg receives attention to the extent of influencing prices. Where there is a preference, and whichever the preference is, one should keep a variety of fowls that lay eggs of the preferred color.—From "Profitable Chicken Raising," by Roscoe B. Sando, in The Outing Magazine for April.

$1,000 PILE CURE

A Thousand Dollar Guarantee goes with every bottle of Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid—the only certain cure for every form of Piles.

George Cook, St. Thomas, Ont., writes:

"Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid cured me of a very bad case of Piles of over ten years' standing. I had tried everything but got no permanent cure. Till I used Hem-Roid. I had Blind and Bleeding Piles and suffered everything. Ointments and local treatments failed but Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid cured me perfectly."

Hem-Roid is a tablet taken internally which removes the cause of Piles. $1.00 at R. W. Jordan's, Bedford, Pa., or Dr. Leonhardt Co., Station B, Buffalo, N. Y.

Exhausting the Soil

When a country has been farmed for forty years or more strictly on a grain-farming basis, things begin to look pretty desolate, unless legume crops have been raised extensively; and, as a rule, where such short-sighted methods of farming are in practice the value of legumes is given little heed.

HOW COUGH GERMS MULTIPLY

When you have a cold the mucous membrane is inflamed and the disease germs which you breathe find lodgment and multiply, especially the pneumonia germ. Foley's Honey and Tar soothes and heals the inflamed air passage, stops the cough and expels the cold from your system. Refuse substitutes. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Colored Blouses

The revival of colored blouses, or of a combination of white and colors, are a step onward. Nothing more ugly, nor more generally adopted, has ever appeared than the pure-white blouses for wear with other than white costumes. The abrupt breaking of the lines at the waist and the division of the human body into apparently two disjointed halves was most deplorable, but the convenience of the white blouse led to its immediate and wholesale adoption.

THOUSANDS PERISH

Thousands perish every year from consumption resulting from a cold. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the most obstinate racking coughs and expels the cold from your system and prevents consumption and pneumonia. It has cured many cases of incipient consumption. Ed. D. Heckerman.

When Horses Are in Condition

A bright, clear eye, a brilliant coat, high spirit and mettles, are good signs of perfect condition in the horse. To this might be added sufficient flesh thoroughly to "round him out" but not enough to interfere in the slightest degree with his natural action, which on no account must be impeded.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers, small, safe, sure little liver pills. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

For Whooping Cough

Take the white of an egg and beat it until it is a stiff froth, add a teaspoonful of granulated sugar and eight drops of oil of tar; give a teaspoonful of this mixture to a baby every two hours, and a little more to those children who are older. This remedy is harmless.

Kodol is today the best known and most reliable remedy for all disorders of the stomach, such as dyspepsia, heart burn, sour stomach and belching of gas. Kodol contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. Kodol is pleasant to take. It is guaranteed to give relief and is sold here by Ed. D. Heckerman.

my health began to improve and I soon grew strong and fat."

Such sworn testimony, from many witnesses, convinced the Court and secured for us a permanent injunction against a worthless imitation. For nearly half a century PISO'S Cure has been relieving the most obstinate coughs and colds of both bronchial and pulmonary nature.

Give it a fair trial and it will cure you

"Where to plant your shrubs" is a really practical little essay, with diagrams, and will show the perplexed housewife how to make the most of this kind of landscape gardening.

Elwood Calahan moved into his new home at Springhope, lately purchased from Robert Allison, who is moving to Windber.

William Jordan had talked to him not over three minutes before he found him lying dead. Mr. Smith was a life-long member of the German Baptist church, was a good neighbor, and an honest man.
